FASHIONS.

Bloomers or Skirts—How to Overcome Some Disadvantages of the Latter.

It is impossible to discuss fashions without entering upon the subject of a bicycle dress, for a great many women are now planning to enjoy this amusement to the greatest advantage possible through the autumn.

Bicycling is not an exercise intended by nature to exploit to the best the outlines of the feminine form divine. But fashion commands and woman obeys, with results which are not altogether satisfactory to those who love her best. This is merely by the way. The important point is that too many costumes are extremely unsuited to such exercise and lack every measure of elegance which should be possessed by dresses donned by woman, whether following the road of fashion upon wheels or pursuing the ordinary course of life upon her two little feet.

The most important feature of the bicycle skirt is its want of width. From the waist to the saddle it is as well to dispense with fullness. This way you may look ungainly. Ungainly you are bound to look on a bicycle, viewed from the back.

A very good authority asserts that the bicycling skirt should measure only some 2 to 2 1/2 yards round the hem, and the most convenient shape is buttoned up either side. These buttons should be left undone while riding, from the knees only, be it understood, and the cloth should of course have a very wide wrap so that no possible peep at the knickerbockers can be obtained, for the knickerbockers underneath, whatever may be the skirt, go without saying, the ordinary conventional lingerie of woman being out of question on the subject.

Some of the bicycling dresses have full trousers sewed in with the side seams of the skirt, but this appears to have but scant advantages, the only one being that the skirt under such circumstances is less likely to blow up, a contingency easily averted by a simple strap and button.

The portable jacket form of bodies counts its votaries by large numbers. As a summer garment it appears very warm and lacks all measure of elegance when left open, but for autumn its suitability is apparent, and it promises to be popular.

With either full knickerbockers or any form of skirt the Eton jacket finds many advocates. It is worn with an ordinary cambric or silk shirt. As to choice of color in costume, the practical person will adopt the various shades of gray and dust tints for obvious reasons, and alpaca is a much used material. The knickerbocker suits with Eton jackets are pronounced by many ardent devotees of the wheel and well calculated to reflect of style, comfort and suitability.

What the Spanish Need.

A group of men were talking over the Spanish anti-American riots yesterday in front of the Bailey block, and the war spirit ran pretty high. As usual with Spanish discussions, the subject was just what should be done by the United States. There was one suggestion made that "brought down the house." A wag said that what the Spanish needed was something to cool their heads and suggested sending them a cargo of Rainier Beer, and added, "when the Spanish find what good beer the Rainier Beer is, they would not want to fight with the country where it is made." On tap or in bottles at the Criterion.
